In her elegant book All the Difference, Patricia Horvath recounts the difficult time of wrestling both with medical challenges and adolescence. It is a graceful story not of overcoming challenge, but of accepting it.

Nina MacLaughin, The Boston Globe

Her narrative manages to be vivid and concrete, on the one hand, and astute and reflective, on the other. It's funny, touching, shrewd, smart, and luminously written--a remarkable achievement.

G. Thomas Couser, Author of Memoir: An Introduction & Recovering Bodies: Illness, Disability and Life Writing

PATRICIA HORVATH's stories and essays have been published widely in literary journals including The Massachusetts Review, New Ohio Review, The Los Angeles Review, and Confrontation. She is the recipient of Bellevue Literary Review's Goldenberg Prize in Fiction and New York Foundation for the Arts Fellowships in fiction and literary nonfiction. She teaches at Framingham State University in Massachusetts.
